LETTER FROM THE CEO

The Center has seen a lot of changes over the last year. We said farewell to some cherished friends and colleagues and welcomed great new talent. Throughout these transitions we have continued, without hesitation, to respond to the needs of survivors of intimate partner or sexual violence and their families.

The community's needs are great. We have seen both increased demand in sexual assault services in the era of #MeToo and the number of clients incoming from lethality assessments. Tragically, this past year domestic violence homicide was also on the rise.

As a new era dawns at The Center, we will continue serving individuals in our community and take the opportunity to bring a fresh perspective, refine our work and focus on improved quality and sustainability. Continually we strive to discover new ways of addressing issues that arise in an everchanging environment.

Elizabeth Wessels-Martin

2018 Report To The Community

Intimate partner violence and sexual violence are complicated issues. Those who are affected by interpersonal violence need support and care that is tailored to their individual needs. At The Center we work with individuals to determine the path that best fits their situation and goals. Much like the complexity of a puzzle, we help individuals slowly put the pieces back together.

The Center could not provide 100% free services 24/7 365 days a year without volunteers, donors and community partners. Support like yours is a vital component of The Center. Survivors wouldn't be able to continue their journey without your piece providing critical support!
